The Speed You Need to Effectively Minimize Disasters

AOTC has a track record of executing strongly managed responses to incidents that pose immediate (and possibly long-term) environmental and human health risks. We have reliability and expertise in biohazardous, hazardous, and chemical emergency response, and are knowledgeable in all of the conventional and cutting-edge techniques to protect environmental and human health. Most importantly, though, our Micro-ER units are distributed throughout the Southeastern United States – so wherever you are, we are nearby.

What happens in the event of an emergency, even if it happens in the middle of the night? Our 24/7 emergency response center transmits the order and details to the Micro-ER unit nearest you. That unit then rapidly deploys trained, experienced, and certified technicians to minimize the impact on your operations, the health of your personnel, and any potential liability.
